Suomi.fi e-Identification

Suomi.fi e-Identification is a joint identification service for public sector organisations to identify the end-users of their digital services.

The e-Identification service verifies the end user's identification data offered by the Finnish identification tokens by comparing the information with the information in the Population Information System. The information transmitted can be complemented with information from the Population Information System data according to the needs of the e-service.

The Identification service offers a wide range of identification tokens to the end user. The Digital and Population Data Services Agency maintains a selection of tokens and is responsible for agreements with the providers of the identification tokens. All these tokens are available in the e-services through a single technical interface.

Under the Act on the Joint Electronic Support Services in Public Administration (571/2016), Suomi.fi e-Identification can be used by public administration organisations, municipalities and organisations that have been appointed to independently perform a public administrative task based on an act, a decree issued by virtue of an act or an administrative authority's decision issued by virtue of an act.

The service is subject to a fee for organisations that are not part of public administration or companies owned by it, i.e. service consumers whose operation is not funded substantially from state funds.
